Electro-voice.

1425 N. Y. Ave.,
Washington, D. C.

Office of York Enterprise,
Yorkville, S. C., Dec. 14, 1891.

Atlantic Electro-voice: Gentlemen—For the past five years my wife has been a sufferer from dyspepsia. So completely did the disease make a wreck of her former self that life was almost unendurable. Her nervous system was almost entirely destroyed, and the slightest noise would throw her into a nervous spasm, which would last for hours. Medical skill failed to bring any relief.

Through the recommendation of an eminent divine we were induced to try the Electro-voice. After a persistent use of the instrument, the effect has been wonderful. Her nervous system has been restored to its almost normal condition; her digestion is wonderfully improved; she is rapidly gaining in flesh; and, upon the whole, is making a rapid recovery, which speaks volumes for the wonderful curative power of the Electro-voice, and which we have considered before. If any are skeptical on the subject, let them try the Electro-voice, and its wonderful powers will quickly dispel all doubt. Yours truly, W. M. PROBERT.

Ended Her Adventurous Life.
A romantic story with a sad ending was contained in the mail received at the State Department Friday from the United States consulate at Acapulco, Mexico.

Several days ago a handsome young woman, giving her name as Cora Montgomery, called upon the consul of the United States and asked for protection against the brutal treatment of her alleged husband, named Gomez, a gambler well known throughout Mexico. According to the woman's story, which she desired was to get back to the United States, and to Washington especially, where her family lived, one of her brothers, being a government official there. She was assured by the consul that she might remain under his protection unless measures were perfected for sending her back to her relatives. Subsequently, however, the woman was charged with the robbery of a large sum of money and valuable jewelry from Gomez, and an effort was made to get her into the hands of the Mexican authorities.

Through the efforts, however, of the Consul a compromise was effected by which the woman restored the greater portion of the money and the jewelry to the gambler, $300 being retained for her necessary expenses in reaching Washington and her friends.

Shortly after these arrangements were perfected the young woman went to her room, ostensibly to prepare for her journey homeward, but really to commit suicide. She had provided herself with a large quantity of carbolic acid, and drank nearly half a teaspoonful of the poison. She lingered for an hour and died in great agony. Inquiry showed that she had left home and friends several months ago with a rich young man, who took her to Mexico with him, where he deserted the girl, who had become infatuated with the gambler Gomez. She had not married the latter, according to her statement. In a fit of rage one day she took about $2,000 in cash and all the jewelry of the gambler and despatched, nothing being heard of her until she turned up at the United States Consulate.

Information of the sad ending of her life has been conveyed to her relatives in Washington, and instructions have been given to forward the body for interment there.

Massacre in Manchuria.
The Chinese Legation in Paris received an official dispatch on Saturday to the effect that on the night of November 18 two secret societies named Tsinthan and Tsinli, composed of immigrants from China proper, proceeded to Mongolia, and inaugurated a revolt against the Chinese government in the province of Jehol. According to the latest estimates from three hundred to five hundred Christians, several native priests, a Mongolian prince and some unconverted natives were massacred. Many churches were pillaged and burned, especially in the town of Fainching and Pingcheng. The Emperor, on learning of the uprising ordered the Tsinli-Yamen (Foreign Office) to telegraph to the Governor General of the province and to all the Tartar commanders in Manchuria to dispatch all their available troops to the scene of the revolt. The first engagement between the troops and the rebels took place on November 25. The rebels were defeated, the troops advancing on them from various points and completely surrounding them. The different commanders have been instructed to protect all religious establishments and to prevent further massacres. The rebels are unable to count on the support of the inhabitants, and it is very likely that they will soon be suppressed.

A MONSTER SERPENT FOUND.—The strange monster which has frequently been seen in Lake Keweenaw, Conn., has been captured. It is a serpent of an unknown species, and its immense size was not exaggerated by those who saw it at various times. Warren, a charcoal burner who has a pit near the lake, was driving along the shore Friday evening when he found the serpent lying dormant and nearly frozen on the sand. It was securely bound with ropes and taken to Danbury, where hundreds have seen it. Its length is 19 feet 8 inches, and its body is 32 inches in circumference. Its head is flat and its body is covered with scales of a black and brown color.
